Question Number one: (20 points)

Read the text then do the tasks below:

A survey of 3,000 workers in the UK has revealed the top ten dream jobs. Being ' dream' jobs, a certain amount of fantasy is involved, but what is the reality behind the dream? We asked some professionals what doing these jobs was really like.

Airline pilot, James Hutchings: 'They didn't really make this the first choice, did they? I'm not sure my job is what people were thinking of. They probably wanted to be jet fighter pilots. The work isn't as exciting as people think. You don't see the world, just the insides of airports. There isn't much job security either. There are lots of ways you could lose your job. It suits me at the moment because I'm young and single, but I wouldn't want to be still doing it in ten years' time'.

TV and theatre actor, Jane Nicholson: 'There's nothing I'd rather do. The feeling you get is like nothing else, and it outweighs the many negatives, like the pressure, the stage fright and the long periods without work. Unless you're a big star, you never know where the next job is going to come from'.

Pianist and singer, Amina Kureishi: 'Almost anyone can become a musician, but the trick is to make a living from it. I mean, there are singers, there are good singers and there are successful singers, but they're three different things. For most of us it's a life of late nights, long hours practicing and travelling from place to place, being paid just enough to put food on the table. The majority of professional musicians need other incomes, usually from teaching.'

Charity worker, Ben Harper: 'I can understand why this work comes so high in the list. It's the job satisfaction, isn't it? A lot of people probably feel they'd rather do something to help others than work for a company making money for someone else. But the thing is that for most charity workers, it's just an office job. Even non-profit organisations have to be run like businesses these days. The people at the top are paid well, but those lower down are often volunteers.

Why does it seem that there is not enough time in the day to get work done? It seems as "we are always fighting with the clock." Time Management is an answer to the issue of " not enough time." Time management is a set of principles, practices, skills, tools and systems that help us use time to do what we want. There are many ways of improving time management- such as writing a schedule, prioritizing, adjusting your sleeping patterns and down loading productivity apps. If you don't fully understand why time management is important, you may not have the motivation to change. Here are some reasons why time management is important:

1. _____: Take a few moments to reflect on your day: Do you feel as you're always busy, but achieve a little? Or is there something that's been keeping you up at night with worry? If you answered "yes" to those questions, you're likely feeling stressed. If you don't feel you have control of your time and are always desperately working to meet deadlines, it's highly likely that your health is suffering. Time management skills can help to reduce or even remove stress.
2. _____: One of the hidden dangers of poor time management is that it kills your chances of expanding your potentials and trying out new things. If you go through life rushing from one task to the next, you never have the chance to discover different opportunities. With more free time, you may be able to volunteer at a local charity or help someone in need.
3. _____: A feeling of being safe or protected is needed to lead a healthy and disease-free life. Restlessness and stress are the root cause for the lack of peace. Stress causes to think and do work uncomfortably, and this leads to chains of emotion which badly affect people around us. By managing the time wisely, we will get peace of mind and give ourselves and our loved ones the much desired time and attention.
